Many bright young minds in Nepal never get the opportunity to develop under the influence of a quality education. Bright Futures Foundation has developed a program to find some of these bright young students and pair them up with willing donors who can help make education a reality for them.

Since 2001, Bright Futures has been helping able young students to attend Galaxy School, a large and prestigious private school in Kathmandu. Created and guided by Geeta Rana, the school strives to develop individuals who can take care of themselves and aspire to serving their communities and their country. All scholarship students are boarded at the school, where they can take full advantage of the extra-curricular activities, after school study programs and sports.

There are currently 18 Bright Futures scholarship students at Galaxy School. Students are carefully screened and evaluated for factors that will influence their ability to succeed, such as intellectual ability, familial support, and motivation.

We believe education is essential for positive change

Students must pledge to work hard, to treat women and girls with respect and to help a young Nepali girl get an education once they have completed their own schooling.

Galaxy School keeps in close contact with Bright Futures Foundation. They provide regular progress reports, which are evaluated in Oregon by professional educators. Our Bright Futures Foundation intern in Nepal visits the students at least twice a month to help keep them on track and to identify and resolve concerns as they arise.

The cost of tuition and board for one student is only $1,750 per year. Please consider sponsoring a student today. Your donation can make a significant difference to a child, a community and a country.
